App Support Privacy Policy San Salvador, El Salvador - From a distance it looked like a breakdown. Several cars gathered on the side of the highway on Tuesday morning. But this gathering, made up of police officers and photographers, disguised a terrible but all too common fact of everyday life in El Salvador - the murder of a young woman. In this small Latin American country, women bear the brunt of a brutal gang culture. They are drug mules and forced by foster parents of children of gang members who are either in prison or dead. Sometimes women are forced into gangs themselves, subjected to violent initiations, which can include rape, beatings and murder. That morning, on the side of a highway in Apopa, a district north of the capital San Salvador, lay the body of 22-year-old Jennifer Landaverde, her exposed painted red toenails sticking out of a white sheet. Neighbors say Landaverde had problems with a local gang, Barrio 18. At dawn, she left home to go to work in the market stalls in the city. Her mother heard gunshots and then found the body. Landaverde was shot eight times. Police say there is nothing to indicate sexual assault that has smoud many communities in El Salvador. But photos of her body, snapped by news photographers at the scene, showed her dressed around her ankles. Officers dragged Landaverde to the back of a police pickup. The dead woman's shoes were handed over to her mother, who wept when she received them. On waking up the next day, in villages in Apopa, where a few years ago gangs would never have bothered extending their tentacles, a little more was said about how Landaverde came to be there. A woman is murdered in El Salvador every 19 hours; murder -- more generally -- occurs every two hours. However, this slight statistical advantage does not lessen the brutality faced by women in a society where 10% of people are allegedly in a gang or under the influence of one of them, according to one government estimate. The UN Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial killings, Agnes Callamard, told CNN that women's bodies are considered territory for revenge and control. Gangs are male-dominated and girls and women part of the territory they control. Callamard also noted that about one in 10 murders of women leads to convictions. I have also received worrying information about the increased number of forced disappearances of both women and men, which may indicate an even higher number of homicides, she said. It is worrying that this figure may be underestimated due to the lack of complaints made for fear of retaliation. added Callamard.However, gangs are not exclusively male and female colleagues convicted of crimes ending up in prisons such as centro de Readaptación para Mujeres, in Ilopango in central El Salvador.Women's prison is a large, sprawling series of compounds, dotted with laundry, and -- oddly enough -- the constant buzzing of light aircraft that seemed to swoop out of the sky during our visit. Aerobics. Deductions. More laundry. Courtyard busted with activity, women want to get out of their little dormitories. There was a time when gang members were kept separate from normal prisoners. Now they are mixed together. Back then, Roxana was the de facto head of the women's gang section. Roxana, who wore a bright blue headscarf and matching eyeliner, said her father died when she was young and her alcoholic mother left her to look after her five siblings. She ended up in the street, easy booty gangs. I thought it was a match, but ... in the end it was ... Sometimes you are forced to walk the streets and you are discriminated against for what you are, so you are forced to rob or kill people ... and sometimes things happen because of alcohol and drugs, she said from behind a wire fence. We are drunk and drugged and we are doing a lot of things now that I regret, she added. Roxana remembered the moment she committed the murder that left her trapped for the rest of her life. It was a rival gang, and if I didn't do what they asked me to do, those were the consequences for me, she said. So I was obligated to do it at that moment. What I did to him, he wanted to do to me, she added about the man she killed. So I had to defend myself, yes, I had to defend myself. Since she was in prison, Roxana has lost not only her mother, but also her son, Rafael. Rafael spent some time in prison, and was murdered shortly after he got out, four months ago, to the day before we talked to his mother. His name is tattooed on the inside of Roxana's right hand. It was very painful for me because I didn't want him to follow my very same path, but before I realized he had become a gang member anymore and I wasn't able to do anything for him, she said. Roxana said she was launched into barrio's infamous gang 18 through an 18-second beating -- in keeping with the obsession the gangs have inflicted on the punishments that honor their name. Eighteen seconds... They threw me out and hit me, it was necessary for me to be a part of it. There are women who are going through worse, she said. Sometimes they're raped, beaten, mistreated. Roxana said she has now left the gang culture. When I started out in the gang, I didn't have kids and I thought everything was pink and sweet. I was just a teenager, she added. But as time passed I realized this is not just a hobby - with murders and murders, she said. By the time I wanted to leave the gang I couldn't, my life was in danger. Maybe I should thank God for bringing me here. The Reporting as Equals project is funded by the European Centre for Journalism through the Innovation in Development Reporting grant programme. Edit Comments Share Glenn Howerton & Rob McElhenney The High School Reunion, Part 2: The Gang's Revenge is the 13th and final episode of the seventh season of It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia. Overview [edit | edit source] Gang hatches plan to correct their tarnished image in the eyes of their old high school classmates. Recap [edit | edit source] Dennis and Dee sit at the table at their meeting, alone and saddened by the events that just occurred. Dee's trying to mock Ingrid Nelson to be cool again, but because Ingrid's not fat anymore, it doesn't work. Dennis Hatches a Plan: Bang Tim Murphy's Black Woman. He approaches Christie and tries to flirt with her, but she tells him that she thought he was gay and that she never wants to sleep with him. Extended Take (BTS) Dee sets out to find Charlie, Mac, and Frank hanging out in their underwear in the bathroom. She offers to help them get revenge, but when their best plan is to get the Freight Train gang out of school together she bails them out and leaves them hanging. They manage to get down and eventually Dee asks them to join the freight train. To begin with, three of her massive wedgie. In the parking lot, Dee has put back on the scoliosis suit she had to wear in high school because wedgie hurt her. An enraged Dennis heads to his Land Rover, where he reveals a hidden space with tools he says he uses for his fetich: zippers, duct tape, a video camera and rubber gloves. The rest of the gang stops him and recruits him to the freight train. Inside the school, they stop the cool kids and Dennis calls Tim Murphy to fight. Dennis yells about Adriano being jealous and turning students against him, but Adriano breaks down that Dennis never a popular character thought he was like he was screaming about everyone who are minions, but then just hanging out with Charlie and Mac. Tim shows that it was Mac who slept with Dennis' prom date, not him. Dennis turns his anger to Mac while the cool kids leave. Frank can inspire everyone, and Charlie proposes to try plan B. Rules of Reality! Plan B is the musical dance number. The gang erases the dance floor and Charlie delivers a speech about how dancing nowadays saves high school students. Start dancing to George Michael's Freedom '90. The crowd, including cool kids, cheers and responds very well to a well choreographed and well performed show. Suddenly, reality snaps into place and it turns out that the gang don't have rhythm or dance talent and are just sweaty falling around on stage. The song ends, Frank returns, and Adriano invites everyone except the gang to his house for an after-party. As they leave high school (in denial over how bad the dance number was), a very drunk waitress offers to bang another person to talk to her. Schmitzy tries to surprise the gang and talks to her. They're leaving together. Cast [edit | edit source] Play [edit | edit source] Special Guest Star [edit | edit source] Jason Sudeikis as Schmitzy Guest Play [edit | edit source] Trivia [edit | edit source] Dee wearing a back brace while performing George Michael's Freedom links several robotic themes of musical performance in Revenge of the Nerds, especially Lamar, who was featured doing Robot Dance. The episode featured guest stars who previously appeared in Seasons One, Three, Five and Six. Mac &amp; Charlie's old friend Doody was first mentioned in Dennis and Dee's Mom Is Dead. Eric Carner's Hungry Eyes plays at a party. In this episode Charlie says he might be a lawyer for Psycho Pete, but unfortunately his speciality is bird law. This is a reference to the opening scene of the fifth season. At 09:53 Dee says "... my ripped in half like tissue paper &lt;... &gt; and we can see how Charlie &amp; Mac smile at each other -- it's a reference to the very beginning the Gang gets held hostage. The ANTI-social network Dennis says: And I could be a man with a fst full of hammers and a suitcase full of duct tape and zip ties. Dennis removes duct tape and zip ties from his suitcase in this episode. Charlie was an excellent dancer in high school. (Gang Dances Their Dons Off) Mac is nipping off his shirt and screaming Hooo!!! is a parody of Michael Jackson. This episode makes fox the musical-comedy Glee, which itself is located in high school. Kings of Leon, who appeared in Part 1 of High School Reunion, disliked Glee and refused to let them use their music. They're fans of Sunny and have been asked to make a guest appearance. We finally met Psycho Pete at 10. In that episode, Psycho Pete says the story that killed and ate his family was a rumie The gang started, and he was committed because of severe social anxiety and depression. I first claim that the waitress' name is revealed in this episode. Frank steals the nametag for Nikki Potnick and later the waitress references that her nametag was nowhere to be found. Quotes [edit | edit source] - Our conductor is insane. Our cargo is pain. - Freight train! - Did you sleep with my prom date? Not... Yes. - How could you do this to me? It was very simple - she was a whore. - If you are handed out to a lot of lemons, you need to stuff them down one's throat until they see yellow. - Listen to us, listen to us! There's a lot of negative energy going on in this school, okay? So I want to talk to you a little bit about dancing. Now back in their 50s and 60s and 70s people danced all the time. That's the way we solved our problems! - This is how they solved their problems. Dancing. Then all of a sudden we stopped dancing. Grunge arrived, dressed in plaid and oversized jeans. Then later the kids wore trench coats and shot each other at school - and that's not cool. But guess what? Guess what's going on in high school now? The kids are dancing again. Organized choreography dance! - They do organized choreography dances to solve their problems. They also give each other and have these things called rainbow parties... From the extended take - Oh, come on ... No, no, no! Oh, damn it! Oh, no, no... Oh, it's all over my!!! Freight train, baby! -- Community content is available under CC-BY-SA, unless otherwise stated.
